

INDEX

- Adaptive expertise, 12–16
 - apprenticeship of observation, 13–15
 - complexity, 16
 - enactment, 15
 - persistent problems in learning to teach, 12–13
- Adaptive experts, 12, 16
- Advanced Placement (AP), 142–143
- Advancement via Individual Determination (AVID), 101–102, 179
- Aesthetic stance, 42–43
- Aesthetic StanceText, 43–44
- Aesthetic StanceThe Poem, 44–45
- Air ball, 184–189
- American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education (AACTE), 11
- Apprenticeship of observation, 12–13, 15
- Archival data, 108–109
- Bricolage, 114–116, 118–120
 - analysis focused on language, 120
 - analysis focused on meaning, 119
 - critical events analysis, 119
 - narrative analysis, 118
 - theoretical reading, 118–119
- Cafeteria conversations, 167–168
 - making meanings from “first impressions”, 168–176
- Carthay Circle Market, 160
- Classroom events, 91
 - analysis of field texts, 112
 - bricolage, 118–120
 - collection, analysis, and representation of field texts, 96–98
 - critical events approach to narrative inquiry, 92–93
 - critical events in teaching and teacher education, 93–96
 - data collection, 102, 109, 112
 - description of participants, 101
 - experience as event, 92
 - field texts to research texts, 112–118
 - participants, 99–101
 - reading as event, 92
 - representation of field texts, 120–121
 - selection of participants, 100–101
 - teaching as event, 92
 - verisimilitude, 121–122
- Classroom experiences, 106, 194
 - participating in, 106–107
- Classroom literacy, 10, 22–23
 - adaptive expertise, 12–16
 - considering problems in context of learning to teach English, 17–22
 - context, 29
 - experience in reading and composing classroom events, 46–50
 - framework, 23, 212–213
 - knowing and doing in teacher education, 10–11
 - making meaning, 33–39
 - meaning, 32–33
 - meaning as event, 39–46
 - minding gap with literacy learning, 8–9, 29
 - model, 211
 - teaching/learning to read, 9–10
 - theoretical framework, 5–6, 22, 30, 32, 121, 206
 - transactional teaching and learning theory, 23–27
- Classroom texts

- efferent-aesthetic stance, 180–181
 - making meaning, 177–179
 - reading and composing student
 - teaching, 181–183
 - reading students, 183–189
 - teachers as readers of, 212–214
 - When I Think of My Name,
 - 179–180
- Classrooms, 16
 - artifacts, 105
 - communication, 20
 - happenings, 206–207
 - life, 91
 - piecing classroom quilt, 71–73
 - teacher, 5
 - teachers as writers of classroom as
 - text, 214–216
- Commonplaces, 65
- Communication, 20
- Communicators, teachers as, 22–23
- Complexity, 16
- Confidence, 197–198
- Cooperating teacher (CT), 191, 194
- Creating for writing, 211
- Critical events
 - analysis, 119
 - approach to narrative inquiry,
 - 92–93
 - operational definition, 96
 - in teaching and teacher education,
 - 93–96
 - types, 95–96
- Data files, 104
- Data matrix, 98
- Deweyan view of narrative inquiry,
 - 48–50
- Digital files, 104
- Disciplined improvisations, 16
- Duration of study, 66
- Education
 - course experiences, 194
 - experiences, 191
- Educational research, 91–92
- Efferent stance, 42
- Efferent-aesthetic stance, 180–181
- Enactment, 15
- English
 - considering problems in context of
 - learning to teach, 17–22
 - education, 11, 205–206
- Events, 96
 - as poem, 216–217
- Experience
 - in classroom literacy, 29
 - as event, 73, 86, 92
 - in learning, 47
 - in narrative inquiry, 48
- External texts, 22, 31–32, 212–213
- Extrinsic critical events in teaching, 95
- Field notes, 107–108
- Field texts
 - analysis of, 112
 - collection, analysis, and representation of, 96–98
 - representation, 120–121
 - to research texts, 112–118
- First impressions, 149, 151, 162, 165
 - making meanings from, 168–176
- Florida Council Teachers of English
 - (FCTE), 3, 19
- Frame of expectations, 17
- Individuals-teachers, 219–220
- Internal text, 22, 31–32, 212–213
- International Literacy Association,
 - 205–206
- Interpretive turn, 57
- Interviewer, 103
- Interviews, 103–104, 109
 - protocols, 104
 - recording, transcribing, and storing
 - interview data, 104
 - sequence, 103–104
- Intrinsic critical events in teaching, 95
- K-12 classroom teaching and learning
 - settings, 220
- Knower, 207
- Knowing, 207

- Known, 207
- Language, 58
analysis focused on, 120
- Learners, 208
- Learning, 4–6, 16, 91
assumption of reading and writing classroom as text, 19–20
classroom communication, 20
considering problems in context of learning to teach English, 17–22
through experience, 192–196
experience as event, 197–200 holding onto experiences to remember and reuse, 191–192
initial doubt, 192
making meaning with Amy, 191
mentor texts, 192–196
persistent problems in learning to teach, 12–13
process, 205
reading test, 198–200 statement of purpose, 21–22
teaching as reading and writing, 20–22
testing knowledge in action,
196–197
theory of, 200–202
toward theory of transactional teaching and learning, 200–202
as transactional, 210
- Lifespace, 64
- Light of Fireworks, 83–86
- Like events, 96
- Linguistic-experiential reservoir,
41–45
- Literacy, 8–9, 91, 211
education, 9
- Literature as Exploration*, 5
- Living and telling for collecting field texts, 64–65 for data collection, 102
meaning-making, 125, 127–128,
131, 136, 138
stories of beginning teaching,
128–130
- Logo-scientific mode of reasoning.
See Paradigmatic mode of reasoning
- Making meaning, 33–39
from “first impressions”, 168–176
process, 217
“Maybe I Can Go Catch A Few”
story, 139–147
ceremony, 143–144
making connections, 144–147
- Meaning, 208–209
analysis focused on, 119
in classroom literacy, 29, 32–33
as event, 33, 39, 46
piecing meaning from Mia’s stories, 78–79
- Meaning makers
teachers as, 22–23
teachers as readers and, 4–5 teaching events, 216
understanding teachers as, 218–220
- Meaning-making, 125, 127–128, 131, 136 analyzing connections between participants’ and researcher’s, 116
analyzing participants, 113–114
analyzing researcher, 114–116 dropping syllable, 126–127 through envisionment building stances, 138
identity as teacher, 136 and making meaning, 137–138 in new experiences, 196–197
process, 4–5, 9–10, 22
reader, text, and context, 136–138 about relationships and responsibilities, 135–136
teaching, 134–135
- Mentor texts, 192–196

- learning through experience, 192–196
- Metacognition, 8–9
- Multiple-case study, 17
- “My Mother Pieced Quilts” poem, 71, 74
- Narrative inquiry, 11, 55–57, 60, 69, 205–206
 - considerations for designing, 64–67
 - critical events approach to, 92–93
 - in educational research, 59–60
 - literature, 206
 - methodological framework, 61–64
 - philosophical assumptions, 58–59
 - researchers, 206–207
 - space, 74–75
- Narrative mode of reasoning, 25–26
- Narratives, 60
 - analysis, 118
 - inquirers, 64–67
 - making meaning in narrative research, 45–46
 - sketches, 120–121
 - view of experience, 48
- National Academy of Education’s Committee (NAE Committee), 11
- National Council Teachers of English (NCTE), 14, 22–23, 194
- National Research Council, 12
- Negotiating for reading, 211
- Negotiation of entry, 107
- Numbers, 58
- Objectivity, 59
- Other events, 96
- Paradigmatic mode of reasoning, 25
- Personal critical events in teaching, 95
- Personal linguistic-experiential reservoir, 22
- Personification, 153
- Philosophy of experience (Dewey), 61
- Place, 62–64
- Poem, 69–71
 - as event, 216–217
 - experience as event, 73–86
 - piecing classroom quilt, 71–73
 - theory of transactional teaching and learning, 86–89
- Positive critical events, 95–96
- Post-Einsteinian research paradigm, 91–92
- Pragmatism, 38
- Pragmatist philosophical context for making meaning, 37–39
- Problem of complexity, 12–13
- Problem of enactment, 12–13
- Problem of enactment, 15
- Professional development, 213–214
- Professional organizations, 205–206
- Prospective English teachers, 14–15
- Prospective teachers, 7–8, 13–14
- “Pursuing the Dream”, 149–151
- Qualitative methods, 205–206
- Qualitative research methods, 11
- Reader Response Theory, 208
- Readers, 40–41, 208–209
 - conversational voice, 216
 - teachers as, 22–23
- Reading. See also Writing, 8–10, 205–206, 208, 211
 - assumption of reading classroom as text, 19–20
 - classrooms as texts, 79–81
 - and composing meaning, 197–200
 - and composing student teaching, 181–183
 - as data analysis, 117–118
 - as event, 92
 - students, 183–189
 - students as texts, 214
 - students to gauge student attention and understanding, 214
 - teaching as, 20–22
 - test, 198–200
- Real learning, 94–95
- Relationship ethics, 66–67
- Reliability, 59

- Rereading events, 76–78
- Research storyworld, 81–83
- Researcher-participant conversations, 104–105
- Researcher-participant relationship, 66
- Researchers, 14
 - journal, 108
- Rosenblatt's transactional theory of reading, 13, 20–21, 210
- Sampling, 99–100
- Scholars, 14
- Schoolteacher, 14
- Self investment in inquiry, 65–66
- Social science, 57
- Sociality, 62–63
- Sociocognitive conceptions of literacy, 22–23
- Stance, 42–43, 209–210
- Story, 60, 102
 - identifying, 112–113
 - narrative perspective of experience, 61
- Storytelling, 65
- Students, 7–8, 219–220
 - meaning made, 200–201
 - student-generated communicative signs, 214
 - student-teaching internship interview, 191–192
- Tampa Bay Area Writing Project (TBAPW), 194–195
- Teacher education
 - knowing and doing in, 10–11
 - literature, 8–9
 - research, 205–206
- Teacher Education and Learning to Teach (TELT), 15
- Teachers, 208, 210
 - as active meaning-makers before, during, and after teaching events, 216
 - educators, 14, 206–207, 219–220
 - from imagining to exploring, 5–6
 - and meaning makers, 4–5, 218, 220
 - process, 205
 - as reader, 31–32
 - as readers, writers, communicators, and meaning makers, 22–23
 - as readers of classroom text, 212–214
 - reading students as texts, 214
 - reading students to gauge student attention and understanding, 214
 - struggling reader, 3–4
 - as writer, 32
 - as writers of classroom as text, 214–216
- Teaching, 6
 - as event, 92
 - experiences, 192
 - “Maybe I Can Go Catch A Few” story, 139–147
 - meaning-making about, 134–135
 - reading, 139
 - as reading and writing, 20–22
 - teaching/learning to read, 9–10
 - as transactional, 210
- Temporality, 62
- Testing knowledge in action, 196–197
 - fun Fridays story, 196–197
- Texts, 4, 43–44, 208, 211, 217–218
 - assumption of reading and writing classroom as, 19–20
- Theoretical reading, 118–119
- Transaction, 9, 31–32, 207–208, 210
- Transactional paradigm, 10, 35, 37, 207, 210
 - application to reading process, 37
 - implications for language, 36–37
 - implications for social relationships, 37
 - transaction, 207–208
 - TTRW, 208–210
- Transactional teaching, toward theory of, 200–202
- Transactional Teaching and Learning (TTL), 205, 211–212

- event, 218
- evocation and response, 216
- making meaning, 217
- narrative mode of reasoning, 25–26
- poem as event and event as poem, 216–217
- reading as transactional meaning-making experience, 24–25
- significance, 26–27
- teachers as readers of classroom text, 212–214
- teachers as writers of classroom as text, 214–216
- teaching and learning as transactional, 210
- text, 217–218
- theory, 6, 23, 27, 86, 89
- theory of, 211–218
- transactional paradigm, 207–210
- transactional relationship between reader, text, and context, 23–24
- transactional view of experience, 24
- understanding teachers as meaning makers, 218–220
- Transactional theory (Rosenblatt), 33, 35, 208
- Transactional Theory of Reading and Writing (TTRW), 5, 29, 205, 208, 210, 212, 219
 - meaning, 209
 - reader, 209
 - reading, 208
 - stance, 209–210
 - writing, 208
- Transactional view of experience, 47–48, 61
- University coursework artifacts, 109
- Verisimilitude, 121–122
- Writers, teachers as, 22–23
- Writing. See also Learning, 208, 211
 - assumption of writing classroom as text, 19–20
 - as data analysis, 116–117
 - teaching as, 20–22