About the Contributors

Emily Beaulieu Bacchus is an Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. She works on matters related to contentious politics and political corruption. Her first book, Electoral Protest and Democracy in the Developing World (2014) was published with Cambridge University Press, and her research on Legislative Brawling has been featured in the Journal of Politics.

Audrey Baricovich is a graduate student at the University of Kentucky. She specializes in American judicial politics with special interests in judicial-executive relations, US Supreme Court public opinion, and judicial scandals.

Tiffany D. Barnes is a Professor of Political Science at the University of Kentucky. Her book, Gendering Legislative Behavior: Institutional Constraints and Collaboration, (Cambridge University Press 2016) won the Alan Rosenthal Prize from the Legislative Studies Section of the American Political Science Association in 2017. Her other peer-reviewed work appears in journals such as the American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Comparative Political Studies, Legislative Studies Quarterly, Political Research Quarterly, Governance, and Politics & Gender.

Scott Basinger is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Director of Graduate Studies at the University of Houston. His research on political scandals has been published in Political Research Quarterly, Political Science Quarterly, Public Integrity, Congress & the Presidency, and edited volumes. He has also published extensively on congressional elections, judicial confirmations, and political economy. Since earning his doctorate at the University of California, San Diego, he has had academic appointments at Stanford University, SUNY Stony Brook, and the University of Houston.

Casey Burgat is the Director of the Legislative Affairs program at the Graduate School of Political Management at The George Washington University. Previously, Dr Burgat was a Senior Governance Fellow at the R Street Institute, where his research focused on issues of congressional capacity and reform. He has also worked at the Congressional Research Service. In addition, he served in the Executive Branch Operations and the Congress & Judiciary sections. Dr Burgat received his PhD from the University of Maryland, College Park.

April K. Clark is an Associate Professor and Assistant Chair of Political Science at Northern Illinois University. Dr Clark specializes in the development of political attitudes and behavior. Her published work covers various topics, including environmentalism, social trust, social capital, political tolerance, corruption, and politics and religion. Dr Clark's research has also been published in various academic journals, including Public Opinion Quarterly, American Politics Research, Political Research Quarterly, Social Science Research, Politics and Religion and Politics, and Gender and important media outlets such as The Washington Post, USA Today, The Huffington Post, NBC.com.

Jill Dunlap is the Senior Director for Research, Policy, and Civic Engagement at NASPA-Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education. Before joining NASPA, Jill worked closely with college student survivors of interpersonal violence in a professional capacity for more than 14 years at three different campuses. In 2014, Jill served as the nonfederal negotiator representing four-year public institutions on the Violence Against Women Act negotiated rulemaking committee. She completed her PhD in Political Science and Public Administration at Northern Illinois University, where her dissertation work focused on the experiences of students impacted by sexual violence on campus. In addition, Jill has served as a national consultant with various organizations, including the Victims' Rights Law Center, the National Sexual Violence Resource Center, and the Department of Defense.

Katherine Hoss is a Lecturer and Undergraduate Administrator for the Department of Political Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She also serves as the Administrative Director of the MIT Washington Summer Internship Program.

Lewis Hoss is the Director of Professional Development at the Midwest Political Science Association. He teaches in the Department of History, Political Science, and Criminal Justice at Rivier University. He has written on liberalism and modern political thought.

David K. Jesuit is a Professor of Political Science in the School of Politics, Society, Justice, and Public Service at Central Michigan University. He has been editor or coeditor of several academic volumes and journals, including the recently published book Collaborative Governance for Local Economic Development: Lessons from Countries around the World (Routledge, 2020). Together with partners in Europe and Canada, he has taken the lead role in creating and expanding the Transnational Initiative on Governance Research and Education Network, or "TIGRE Net." This international group of scholars, students, and field specialists is dedicated to identifying the opportunities and challenges public managers confront in the global economy and providing them with the strategies and skills necessary to overcome obstacles to domestic, cross-border, and international coordination.

Nicole Loring is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Rivier University. She earned her PhD and MA in Political Science at Northern Illinois University and her BA in Political Science and Economics at Syracuse University. Her research looks at Southeast Asian politics, propaganda, authoritarianism, democratization, and women's political participation. For example, her article "Overcoming Barriers: Myanmar's Recent Elections and Women's Political Participation" explores the historical and political barriers facing women who wish to participate in Burmese politics.

Collin Paschall is a Senior Lecturer and Program Coordinator in the Center for Advanced Governmental Studies at Johns Hopkins University. Dr Paschall teaches research design, data analytics, and public policy courses. His research is divided between congressional policymaking and citizens' perceptions of policy problems. He received his PhD from the University Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and was an APSA Congressional Fellow.

Joseph N. Patten is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Monmouth University, where he teaches courses in American Politics. He received his PhD from West Virginia University in 1996. He most recently co-authored the textbook "Why Politics Matters: An Introduction to Political Science" (3rd edition, 2021) and co-authored articles in the Review of Evolutionary Political Economy (2022), Citizenship, Social & Economics Education (2021), and authored a book chapter in "Democracy in Crisis Around the World" (2020). He also serves as the coach of Monmouth University's Policy Debate Team and as campus advisor to the Washington Center Internship Program.

Michael J. Pomante II is an Assistant Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at Jacksonville University. Dr Pomante specializes in political behavior and election policy. His research has been published in American Politics Research and Election Law Journal and discussed in public media outlets such as The Washington Post, PolitiFact, and FiveThirtyEight. In addition, Dr Pomante's coauthored research on the "Cost of Voting" was identified by Altmetric as the most discussed article in the public realm, by a political scientist, in 2020.

Kaylar Recker currently works at the Department of Labor as a Grants Management Specialist. She received her Master's degree in Political Science from Northern Illinois University in 2021. Her academic interests include American political institutions, such as Congress and the Presidency.

Gregory W. Saxton is a Lecturer in the Political Science Department at Texas Tech University. His research is in Comparative Politics, emphasizing Latin America, class and inequality, corruption, gender-egalitarian attitudes, and comparative political behavior. His dissertation, "Perceptions of Fairness and Political Support in the Face of Economic Inequality," was supported with funding from the National Science Foundation. His other peer-reviewed work appears in Governance, Journal of Elections, Public Opinion, & Parties, Journal of Women, Politics, & Policy, Latin American Politics & Society, Politics, Groups, & Identities, and Political Research Quarterly.
